Appendix D – Public Engagement Summary

Introduction

Management planning for the NHA began in 2020, immediately before the effects of the pandemic began to emerge. The DPC staff initiated the planning process in conjunction with a consulting team from Point Heritage Development Consulting, LLC. A National Heritage Area Management Plan Advisory Committee (henceforth Advisory Committee) was recruited in late 2020 to provide oversight and input during the planning process. The committee's membership is reflective of the breadth of an NHA, including representatives of cultural and recreation organizations, the tourism and hospitality industry, museums, education, agriculture, natural resource conservation, tribal government, local government, the National Park Service, and other public agency representatives. Task groups under the Advisory Committee are at the core of the emerging partnership network.

Early efforts focused on partnerships, those already established and those needing development or outreach. Coordinating partners were identified through a process of staff outreach, virtual meetings with the public, a virtual Delta Heritage Forum, task groups, stakeholder interviews, consultant site visits, and the work of the Advisory Committee.

California State Parks interpretive program staff were contracted to provide guidance and lead development of an interpretive plan for the NHA. The National Park Service provided oversight, technical assistance, and review. Through the planning process described below, the public and partners contributed expertise and ideas, and provided feedback through a variety of outreach opportunities. This section provides an overview of the planning process and key planning partners.

Key Planning Partners

Delta Protection Commission and Staff

The Delta Protection Commission, established by Section 29735 of the California Public Resources Code in the Delta Protection Act of 1992, is named as the NHA coordinating entity in the designating legislation. The 15-member state commission is structured to have predominantly local representation. The DPC includes supervisors and city council members from the five Delta counties (Contra Costa, Sacramento, San Joaquin, Solano, and Yolo), reclamation district members from the central, north, and south Delta, and state agency partners (California Department of Food and Agriculture, California Natural Resources Agency, California State Lands Commission, California State Transportation Agency), as well as ex-officio representation from the California legislature. A list of members is found in Appendix B.

The NHA is one of many programs overseen by the DPC and managed by the eight-person DPC staff. The Program Manager for the National Heritage Area Program led the planning process for the DPC. Other staff members, including the Executive Director, a second Program Manager, a Senior Environmental Planner, Staff Services Manager, and Administrative Analyst also assisted with the project. The Executive Director chairs the Advisory Committee.

National Heritage Area Management Plan Advisory Committee and Task Groups

The Delta Protection Commission established the Advisory Committee in late 2020. The 15-member volunteer committee and additional ex officio members were tasked with providing recommendations on the development of the plan, including expanding outreach to solicit input from diverse stakeholders. The committee membership is reflective of the breadth of the NHA, including geographic, cultural, and multigenerational representation. It includes representatives of:

- Community organizations
- Cultural organizations
- Natural resource conservation organizations
- Recreation organizations
- Agriculture
- Business organizations
- Educational institutions
- Museums
- Tourism entities
- Tribal governments
- Local government
- National Park Service
- Other public agency representatives

The synergy and collaboration within this committee and the task groups lay at the heart of the planning process and the emerging partnership network. A list of participants is found in Appendix B.

National Park Service

As the lead federal agency associated with the NHA, NPS provides the DPC and the NHA partnership network with technical assistance on planning. NPS staff have played several roles. The planner representing John Muir National Historic Site and Port Chicago Naval Magazine National Memorial sat on the Advisory Committee as an ex officio member and participated in multiple management planning task groups. The National Heritage Areas Program Regional Coordinators from both the Intermountain and Pacific-West regions reviewed elements of the plan, participated in Advisory Committee meetings, and provided guidance. The National Heritage Areas Program staff in Washington, DC, which provides guidance to the NHA Program Regional Coordinators, will complete the review of the final document and forward the management plan to the Secretary of the Interior's Office for approval and signature. That office will also lead the formal tribal consultation process for the final management plan.

Point Heritage Development Consulting, LLC

Point Heritage Development Consulting (PointHDC) participated in two phases of planning: from January 2020 to June 2022, and from February 2023 through the plan's completion. The five-member consulting team included two individuals with NHA management experience, a heritage tourism specialist, a retired NPS employee with experience in NHAs, and a graphic designer. Four of the five team members have previous management planning experience. The Sacramento-based graphic designer qualifies as a Disabled Veterans Business Enterprise in California.

California State Parks

The DPC contracted with California State Parks, a sister state agency, to develop the interpretive plan. California State Parks operates nine park units within the NHA, offers interpretation programs at its historic sites and wildlife areas, and offers a variety of recreational opportunities. As an NHA partner, California State Parks can assist other partners with interpretation. The four-member team participated in the planning process, including public meetings, tribal consultation, and an online survey of interpretive providers, from June 2020 through January 2023.

Tribal Nations and Communities

Tribal engagement and consultation, along with a list of tribes invited to participate in planning and details of the engagement and consultation process, are found in Appendix D.

The Planning Process

Seven years passed between the development of the feasibility study and Congressional designation of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta National Heritage Area. During that period, the DPC staff were engaged with heritage-related projects, though planning for a National Heritage Area was a lower priority given uncertainty over Congressional action. The DPC staff pivoted to meet the requirements and benefits of designation, contracting with PointHDC to assist in with management planning, contracting with California State Parks to develop an interpretive plan, and establishing the Advisory Committee.

Following orientation meetings for PointHDC in February and early March 2020, the planning process immediately shifted course due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The pandemic led to a protracted planning process because of uncertainty over the length of pandemic-related restrictions and a difficult shift to virtual meetings, particularly in a region with limited internet coverage. These conditions made building a coalition of communities, organizations, businesses, and residents challenging. Through the DPC's commitment to the NHA, as well as the participation of volunteers on the Advisory Committee and related task groups, planning proceeded, and a coalition began to grow. Over the course of the planning process, the DPC and the consultant team employed a wide range of activities to document the NHA's foundational elements, identify needs and opportunities in the region, gather public input, and develop the programmatic and organizational recommendations in this plan.

Background Research

Site visits, the development of project charters related to several aspects of management planning, and an analysis of existing information provided critical background information for the planning process.

POINTHDC TEAM SITE VISITS

Team members participated in three sites visits to gain an understanding of the Delta's unique natural and engineered landscape. Visits included the Delta's legacy communities (eleven rural communities identified in state legislation), cities along the Carquinez Strait, the Suisun Marsh, John Muir National Historic Site, and many other important sites and landmarks. During the visits, the planning team met with the DPC staff, NPS staff, Advisory Committee members, business owners, elected officials, and representatives from several nonprofit organizations. In addition, they attended DPC and Delta Protection Advisory Committee meetings.

PROJECT CHARTERS

The planning team was initially contracted to develop a series of project charters that would serve as a road map for planning, then was contracted to develop the management plan. The charters provided information on key areas of focus in the management plan, including interpretation, implementation and funding, resource inventory, resource stewardship, heritage development and tourism, and management and organization. Each of the charters contained information on objectives and benefits, potential risks and constraints, stakeholders, and evaluative criteria.

Studies and Reports

Numerous existing studies and reports contain information that helped ground the management plan by providing context and ongoing initiatives, as well as describing existing needs and opportunities. A few are listed here and many others are described in this plan. Significant time, effort, and funding by a number of different state, federal, and local agencies and organizations have built a substantial range of opportunities for collaborative implementation by the DPC and the NHA partnership network.

- The Delta Blue Ribbon Task Force's 2008 Delta Vision Strategic Plan contained both the seeds of the NHA concept and the Delta Plan. The Delta Plan, a regional plan mandated by the state legislature's 2009 Delta Reform Act and coordinated by the Delta Stewardship Council, addresses the state's coequal goals for the Delta – a more reliable statewide water supply and a healthy and protected ecosystem – in a manner that protects and enhances the unique characteristics of the Delta as an evolving place. First completed in 2013, the plan is updated periodically and includes recommendations that enhance community development, cultural resource protection, recreation, and heritage tourism.
- The Feasibility Study for the Sacramento-San Joaquin National Heritage Area (2012) includes a discussion of water and land uses and identifies significant natural, cultural, and historic resources that justify the region's designation as an NHA.
- The Economic Sustainability Plan for the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta (2012) (ESP) contains extensive information on economic and natural resources, a description of the Delta's ecosystem and possible conservation measures, a review of county policies for resource use, and risk management strategies for floods, earthquakes, and sea-level rise.

- More recently, the ESP Recreation and Tourism 2020 Update provided an updated review of the Delta recreation economy and identified numerous opportunities for expanding partnerships benefiting a multitude of key recreation elements of the economy.
- Finally, the Great Delta Trail Master Plan (2022) has descriptions of the Delta's landscape and resources, including levees, agriculture and agritourism, rivers and waterways, roads, bridges, ferries, recreational facilities, and wildlife areas in addition to recommendations for trail development.
- In addition to these region-wide plans, historic district and individual site nominations to the National Register of Historic Places provide historical context for significant places.

In June 2022, the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta National Heritage Area Foundational Report summarized the results from the first phase of planning and established recommendations for completing the plan. The report included the foundation elements of the NHA, including: the mission; vision; significance; themes; partnership network; and objectives. The document laid the groundwork for projects, programs, and organizational development.

As a draft of this management plan was in preparation, the results of the inaugural Delta Residents Survey were released by the Delta Science Program, a subsidiary program of the Delta Stewardship Council.¹ The report contains important baseline information on residents' perceptions of quality of life, sense of place, governance, and risk and resilience to climate change. As many of these are factors on which NHAs hope to assert a positive influence, the longitudinal implementation of the survey will provide important evaluative information about the success of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta NHA.

Outreach and Engagement

Partnerships and public engagement are critical to the success of NHAs. The network of partners and coalition of residents established during planning can help sustain an NHA throughout its existence and likely will evolve and grow over time. As such, management planning includes activities that engage partners and the public, soliciting their input and investment in the mission, vision, goals, and projects and programs of an NHA.

¹ Rudnick, J., Tomari, K., Dobbin, K., Lubell, M., and K. Bidenwig. 2023 Delta Residents Survey Summary Report. Report developed for the Delta Stewardship Council, Delta Science Program. Sacramento, CA.

Public engagement has been a hallmark of this plan. Through in-person and virtual public meetings, the annual Delta Heritage Forum, public presentations and lectures by the DPC NHA Program Manager, stakeholder interviews, Tribal consultation, and an electronic survey, the DPC sought to include residents' and partners' voices, ideas, and aspirations. Moreover, both the DPC and the Advisory Committee are structured to provide representation for the residents and organizations in the Delta, serving as important conduits for information during the planning process and into the future.

As the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta National Heritage Area Management Plan is implemented, public engagement will continue and is built into many of the strategies found in the chapters that follow. In addition, the DPC staff, in conjunction with the Advisory Committee, will provide an annual update to the Delta Protection Commission and the public so that all residents and stakeholder organizations remain informed of and can participate in the management plan's implementation.

NATIONAL HERITAGE AREA MANAGEMENT PLAN ADVISORY COMMITTEE MEETINGS

The Delta Protection Commission approved a charter for the Advisory Committee in September 2020 and appointed 15 individual members and five ex officio members in November 2020. DPC staff, PointHDC, and California State Parks have held 22 meetings with the Advisory Committee since January 2021. During the initial meetings in 2021 the Advisory Committee became familiar with the management plan process, considered DPC roles and partnerships, received updates on the task groups, went through visioning exercises, and discussed the NHA interpretive themes. From 2022 through fall 2022, the Advisory Committee reviewed draft work products, including the interpretive plan, mission and vision statements, resource inventory, goals, and objectives and strategies. Finally, the Advisory Committee received the Administrative Draft Management Plan in late 2023 and began work on getting letters of commitment and support from NHA partners.

TASK GROUP MEETINGS

Four task groups were formed in late 2020 and early 2021 to address specific elements of the management plan: 1) Interpretive Planning, 2) Resource Stewardship, 3) Heritage Development and Tourism, and 4) Organization. Participants in the task groups included members of the Advisory Committee, stakeholders, and subject matter experts. Given the overlap of their respective subjects, individual task groups regularly received updates from other task groups and occasionally met together.

Task group members participated in 22 meetings overall to help analyze and prioritize the information from an online survey, stakeholder interviews, and public meetings. They crafted the mission, vision, and goals for the region, laying an important foundation for all future work. They also identified key opportunities for program and project development, prioritizing them through the development of objectives and strategies. Finally, they helped delineate the appropriate role of and structure for the coordinating entity. A list of members of all four task groups is found in Appendix B.

PRESENTATIONS TO PARTNERS

DPC staff regularly gave updates and presentations to the Commission, Delta Protection Advisory Committee, state agencies, local officials, and nonprofit organizations, including the Delta Stewardship Council, Sacramento County Board of Supervisors, Yolo County Board of Supervisors, and Benicia City Council, about partnerships with the NHA.

ONLINE SURVEYS

The PointHDC team developed an online survey that Advisory Committee members promoted through newsletters, social media, and other outlets. The survey was designed to gather information from residents on the needs of the Delta and potential activities for the NHA. The survey yielded 94 responses. Survey results demonstrated a lack of awareness about the importance of the region's history as well as a need for funding to conserve resources in the region. These are two areas on which the NHA could have a positive impact. In addition, California State Parks sent an interpretive program survey to NHA partners asking about existing interpretive services, themes, opportunities, and challenges.

STAKEHOLDER INTERVIEWS

The PointHDC team completed 12 interviews with stakeholders from across the region that could provide insight into various aspects of the NHA. These confidential interviews provided more in-depth information than the conversations that occurred during the site visits, providing valuable ideas on the possibility of potential projects and programs, partner relationships, regional needs, and future NHA management practices. California State Parks also interviewed interpretive providers to learn more about existing interpretive programs and how their organization and sites related to the NHA interpretive themes, and to discuss potential collaboration opportunities.

THE DELTA HERITAGE FORUM AND PUBLIC MEETINGS

The Delta Heritage Forum, an event held annually since 2018, was a vital component of public outreach. During the management planning process, virtual Forums were held in November of 2020 and 2021, and the event returned to an in-person format for 2022. In all three years, the day-long Forum included a focus on the management plan. The Forum will continue as a public engagement event for the NHA in the future.

In 2020, many partners from cultural, historical, and natural resource partners gave presentations on existing activities that align with NHA practices, and PointHDC introduced management planning. In 2021, sessions on management planning and the development of hubs within the NHA dovetailed with each other. Partners and planners hosted breakout groups on several emerging actions: tourism development and promotion; cultural and living traditions; recreation; preservation of the built environment; and conservation of natural resources. In the discussions, participants discussed each action area and considered potential roles for the NHA coordinating entity. In 2022, the Forum featured the interpretive plan, with a discussion on themes and potential activities, panels by local heritage practitioners and a professional from another NHA, and a presentation of the Foundational Report.

In addition to the annual Delta Heritage Forum, PointHDC and California State Parks planned and conducted two in-person public meetings to gather input for the plan. One was held in Benicia on August 30, 2021, and a second was held in Walnut Grove on August 31, 2021. The agenda for both meetings included an overview of NHAs and a timeline for development of the management plan. Attendees participated in breakout groups to discuss opportunities in interpretation, education, tourism, recreation, and stewardship of cultural, natural, and historic resources. Participants identified challenges and opportunities related to each topic as well as potential NHA partners. Information from the meetings provided the foundation for the work of the task groups in developing the plan's draft objectives and strategies.

In 2024, a final series of meetings to present the Public Review Draft Management Plan will be held in eastern Contra Costa County and Walnut Grove on February 21 and 22, along with a virtual meeting and a separate meeting with tribal officials.

Appendix E – Tribal Engagement and Consultation

Introduction

California has a rich and complex legacy of Indigenous culture from prehistory to the present. Today, no federally or non-federally recognized Tribes have territorial holdings within the NHA, although many Tribal members still call the Delta home. The Delta remains a culturally significant place for Tribes, many of whom have ancestral ties to the region and continue to maintain a relationship with the region through a wide variety of cultural and conservation initiatives and traditions, as well as participation in state and federal consultations. Both state and federal consultation are required for the development of this management plan by Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act, the National Environmental Policy Act, designating legislation for the NHA, and Governor's Executive Order B-10-11 of 2011. These mandates are described below.

Consultation Requirements

As both a California state agency and NHA local coordinating entity, the DPC must engage with Tribal governments during the NHA management planning process. However, the DPC staff have sought to exceed these basic requirements to establish a strong foundation for long-term engagement with federally and state-recognized Nations and Tribes.

Governor Jerry Brown's Executive Order B-10-11 (2011) requires that each California state agency have a tribal liaison that engages in open, respectful, ongoing consultation with appropriate Native American Tribes or groups to properly manage areas, places, objects, or burials associated with their heritage, sacred sites, and traditional cultural properties or cultural traditions. Governor Gavin Newsom's Executive Order N-15-19 (2019) reaffirms the principles in Governor Brown's executive order and acknowledges and apologizes on behalf of the State for the historical violence, exploitation, dispossession, and attempted destruction of Tribal communities, which dislocated Native Americans from their ancestral land and sacred practices. The NHA Program Manager serves as the DPC Tribal Liaison and participates in the California Natural Resources Agency's Bay-Delta Tribal Engagement Working Group with other tribal liaisons.

National Historic Preservation Act Section 106 and the National Environmental Policy Act require consultation between federal agencies, State Historic Preservation Officers, and appropriate Tribal government officials, including Tribal Historic Preservation Officers. Federal Executive Order 13175 and the Department of the Interior Policy on Consultation with Native American Tribes require park units to conduct government-to-government consultations with federally recognized Native American Tribes when undertaking any Federal action that may have a direct impact on Tribes or Tribal lands. Appropriate Tribal officials are contacted at the earliest possible point in the planning process so that Tribal input can be incorporated into planning documents.

Tribal Engagement and Consultation

Initial efforts at Tribal consultation included appointing Native American Tribal members to the Advisory Committee and task groups. In September 2021, the DPC staff organized a meeting of the Tribal Engagement Working Group. The working group included representatives of the Advisory Committee, a staff person from the California State Parks tribal liaison office, and the California State Parks and PointHDC teams. The working group was instrumental in identifying objectives related to resource conservation, Tribal access to lands and resources in the NHA, intergenerational education, and interpretation.

In June 2021, the DPC staff sent and emailed letters to 33 Tribal representatives from 23 Tribes, using a list from California's Native American Heritage Commission. The California State Parks team mailed a separate consultation letter, sent follow-up emails, and made phone calls to the Native American Heritage Commission list in April 2022 requesting meetings for the interpretive plan. Six Tribes responded with interest in a consultation, and the team set up virtual meetings and corresponded via email to share documents and receive input. These Native American Tribes requested the DPC continue consultation throughout the planning process and expressed interest in participating in a Tribal advisory committee recommended in this plan. Interested Tribes were also added as ex officio members of the Advisory Committee.

In April 2023, the DPC's sister agency, the Delta Stewardship Council, hosted representatives from four California Native American Tribes for a listening session. Topics covered during the session included Indigenous peoples' ties to the Delta, their sovereignty and relation to the State, and their input regarding Delta management. The DPC's Tribal Liaison and several Advisory Committee members participated in the session, which provided an opportunity to hear

Tribal perspectives and ask questions to facilitate a shared understanding that informs Tribal engagement in the Delta.

In January 2024, after receiving an updated Tribal representative list from the Native American Heritage Commission, the DPC sent hard copy and electronic versions of a letter to 47 representatives of 22 Tribes. The letter solicited their input on the administrative draft chapters, notified them that the DPC will hold a meeting with tribal representatives during the public review period, and alerted them that the draft copy of the full plan will be sent to them concurrently with submission to NPS for an additional 30-day review. DPC staff followed up by telephone with Tribal representatives on the list.

The current Native American Heritage Commission list identified 21 tribes with historical connections to the Delta, including 11 federally recognized tribes. Another federally recognized Tribe participated in a Delta Stewardship Council listening session on the Delta in April 2023. All twenty-two were invited to participate in planning, including the offer of government-to-government consultation for the federally recognized Tribes. These Tribes include:

- Amah Mutsun Tribal Band of Mission San Juan Bautista
- Buena Vista Rancheria of Me-Wuk Indians
- Cachil Dehe Band of Indians of the Colusa Indian Wintun Community
- Chicken Ranch Rancheria of Me-Wuk Indians
- Colfax-Todds Valley Consolidated Tribe
- Confederated Villages of Lisjan
- Cortina Rancheria Kletsel Dehe Band of Wintun Indians
- Guidiville Indian Rancheria
- Indian Canyon Mutsun Band of Costanoan
- Lone Band of Miwok Indians
- Muwekma Ohlone Indian Tribe of the San Francisco Bay Area
- Nashville Enterprise Miwok-Maidu-Nishinam Tribe
- North Valley Yokuts Tribe
- Ohlone Indian Tribe
- Paskenta Band of Nomlaki Indians
- Shingle Springs Band of Miwok Indians
- Tamien Nation
- Tsi Akim Maidu
- Tule River Indian Tribe
- United Auburn Indian Community of the Auburn Rancheria
- Wilton Rancheria
- Wuksache Indian Tribe/Eshom Valley Band.
- Yocha Dehe Wintun Nation

Once the public review draft plan is released, Tribes can submit comments to the DPC, who will directly note and address Tribal comments in the revised final management plan version. The NPS and the Tribes will receive the revised final management plan concurrently, meaning that consultation on the final plan will occur within the NPS 180-day window to review the plan. Tribes will submit comments to NPS on the final plan within 30 days. NPS will communicate with them on this final stage consultation effort prior to Secretary of the Interior approval. Any additional comments provided by the Tribes during this time may necessitate revisions by the DPC.

At time of writing, the following Tribes have responded to outreach and participated in planning efforts:

- Buena Vista Rancheria of Me-Wuk Indians
- Confederated Villages of Lisjan
- Paskenta Band of Nomlaki Indians
- Shingle Springs Band of Miwok Indians
- United Auburn Indian Community of the Auburn Rancheria
- Wilton Rancheria
- Yocha Dehe Wintun Nation

The goal for working with Tribes in the development of this plan was to build a foundation for long term relationships and collaboration. Regardless of whether Tribes provide comment or engage in formal consultation for the management plan, the NHA coordinating entity and partnership network will continue outreach to the Tribes with ties to the Delta and will remain committed to Tribal participation in implementing the plan over the next ten years.

Appendix H – Guiding Principles

Guiding Principles for Collaboration between the Delta Protection Commission and its Community and Governmental Partners for the Management of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta National Heritage Area

Preamble: In recognition of the rich tapestry of our heritage, characterized by its diverse cultures, ecosystems, and historical narratives, we, the partners of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta National Heritage Area (NHA) come together in a collaborative endeavor, with a shared commitment to preserving, celebrating, and sharing the NHA's treasures with present and future generations. Our collective vision is to ensure the sustainable stewardship of the NHA by working harmoniously, transparently, and inclusively.

As stewards of this unique and invaluable heritage, we, the partners of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta National Heritage Area, are bound by a common purpose that transcends individual interests, fostering a sense of responsibility and inter-relationship. We endeavor to forge a collaborative partnership that thrives on trust, respect, and a steadfast dedication to the principles that guide our collective actions.

This preamble to our guiding principles underscores our unwavering dedication to the following ideals:

Shared Vision and Mission: The Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta National Heritage Area and its partners establish a shared vision and mission statement articulating the goals and purpose of their collaboration. This shared understanding will guide all collaborative efforts.

Inclusivity and Diversity: Embrace diversity in all forms, including cultural, ethnic, social, and economic backgrounds. Ensure that the voices of all stakeholders are heard and respected in decision-making processes.

Stakeholder Engagement: Foster active and meaningful engagement with local communities, government agencies, non-profit organizations, businesses, and other relevant stakeholders. Encourage their participation in the planning, preservation, and promotion of heritage resources.

Sustainable Practices: Commit to sustainable practices that protect and conserve the natural and cultural resources within the NHA. This includes responsible tourism, environmental stewardship, and other responsible heritage conservation strategies.

Education and Interpretation: Promote education and interpretation programs that enhance public understanding of the NHA's significance. Provide opportunities for learning, research, and storytelling to connect people with their heritage.

Resource Stewardship: Collaborate on the responsible management, preservation, and restoration of heritage resources. Establish clear roles and responsibilities for partners in maintaining the integrity of the NHA.

Capacity Building: Invest in the capacity building of partner organizations and individuals to ensure their ability to contribute effectively to the NHA's goals. Share knowledge, training, and resources to strengthen the partnership.

Transparency and Accountability: Maintain transparency in decision-making processes, funding allocation, and reporting. Establish mechanisms for accountability to ensure that all partners fulfill their commitments.

Adaptability and Innovation: Embrace adaptability and innovation to respond to changing circumstances and emerging challenges. Encourage experimentation and creative solutions to heritage preservation and promotion.

Sustainable Economic Development: Support local economies through heritage-related initiatives, such as heritage tourism, while respecting the NHA's values and resources. Seek a balance between economic growth and conservation.

Data and Research: Prioritize data collection and research to inform decision-making and measure the impact of collaborative efforts. Share findings and insights to enhance the NHA's effectiveness.

Conflict Resolution: Establish a straightforward process for resolving conflicts and disputes among partners. Encourage open dialogue and mediation to maintain a harmonious working relationship.

Long-Term Commitment: Recognize that heritage preservation and promotion are long-term endeavors. Commit to sustained collaboration and the continuation of the NHA's mission beyond short-term goals.

Public Awareness and Advocacy: Engage in public awareness campaigns and advocacy efforts to grow support for the NHA's objectives and secure the necessary resources for its success.

Evaluation and Review: Periodically evaluate the effectiveness of the partnership and make adjustments as needed. Use feedback and lessons learned to continuously improve collaboration and achieve shared goals.

These guiding principles should serve as a foundation for the partnership between the partners of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta National Heritage Area and its various stakeholders, fostering a collaborative environment that ensures the protection and promotion of the NHA's cultural and natural heritage.
